Concept paper

A Silent Crowd

Idea

The idea is to depict the brutality of people and how they suppress the ideas or noble work of others to maximize their benefits. It also highlights how helpless others feel in the face of this cruelty. It's about the way some people abuse their position of authority to crush other people's aspirations, dreams, and well-intentioned plans. Imagine, someone working hard to improve things for their community or the whole world. Instead of being cheered on, they get silenced or pushed away by those who fear change or feel threatened by new ideas.

The rational choice theory explains that decisions individuals make by evaluating costs and benefits to maximize their personal advantage. It's based on the idea that people act to enhance their own well-being. In that context, when someone in a position of power feels that someone else's ideas or admirable efforts are a threat to their status, resources, or influence, they may decide to suppress them. From this perspective, powerful individuals calculate that allowing new ideas might reduce their control and diminish their benefits. So, they are protecting their interests based on a calculated decision, even if it results in harm to others. On the other hand, the people trying to do good for that time and space are often motivated by moral values, which may not align with pure self-interest. Even, though they may act against their own immediate interests, knowing that their ideas might be suppressed or their efforts blocked, still they choose to pursue their goals because they believe in the greater good for the maximum number of individuals.

Involvement and Inspiration

The art is inspired by the famous educational story of the rabbit and the tortoise, based on the film "The Hunt", released in 2020 (an American thriller). The main ideology behind the film extended to a part of the classic rabbit and turtle race story. This triggered the main theme of my idea, mixed with the current political situation of our country. The work I initiated is completely my own idea and was originally displayed by me through visual communication.

Importance

This idea should be made public because this is brutal human behavior, which we do not realize normally, but the harsh activities done by humans are locked within and are rarely seen when a being is going through pressure or the overwhelming feeling of power. So, we have to accept this and develop ourselves with it.

Visualization

A rabbit hangs a turtle by its neck with a dry tree. And other turtles are watching it very helplessly. All the characters are made from origami. 20x20 cm of deep green paper has been used for the turtle hanging and 50x50 cm black paper for the rabbit. For the turtles in the ground, 13x13 cm deep green paper. A dry plant is used for the dry tree with a height of 56 cm. The overall structure is based on 48x29 cm of cardboard. Stones are used at the bottom of the tree.

Message

The black rabbit is a symbol of brutal disagreement, cruelty, and powerful authority. And the green turtle is a hard-to-break free thinker, noble worker, and common individual. Also, the crowd of turtles is a helpless and weak community that can be influenced very easily. This isn't only about physical fights. It also shows how people can ruin good ideas and noble efforts if they have the power.

The Art

Learnings and Outcomes (Self-reflection):

- I learned how to make installation art using simple materials like origami.
- I learned how to make a conceptual creative visual art.
- I understood how an established theory can be used to build an art concept.
- I learned how to connect film and folklore references to strengthen my own creative idea.
